Chuck Ackerman, Republican Party chairman, and Pat Shea, Utah Democratic Party chairman, debate political views during BYU Political Week activities Thursday. Shea and Ackerman agree on the degree of privacy that should be allowed caucuses of the Utah legislature, but need that public participation is necessary for the U.S. political system to work.

Utah's legislature, which is predominantly Republican, should limit its caucus sessions so the public will be informed on how their representatives have reached legislative decisions, said Pat Shea, Utah Democratic Party chairman, during a debate at BYU on Thursday.

Republican Party Chairman Chuck Ackerman agreed, saying the representatives need to be public but the legislative process is an integral setting to discuss complex material.

Shea and Ackerman debated as part of the "U Political Week" activities. Ackerman said he thinks the economic outlook bright while Shea said he fears the future will grim under another term with the Reagan administration.

Ackerman said the public cannot be pluralistic. He predicted how people will vote. They both advocated the necessity of public participation in politics for the system to work. Shea said of all the three bodies in government, the legislature should be allowed fewer privacy privileges. The judicial branch is allowed more in the decision-making process because judges' minds cannot be invaded, he said.

Concerning Utah's voting habits, Ackerman said Utah is fairly reflective of the national mood. He said the public cannot predict how people will vote.

Shea said he agreed, "We really can't afford to have special interests." They both said that participation in government is essential in our system.

"If our system is not running the way you like it then it is because participation is not strong," Shea said.

being accountable to citizenry."

Ackerman said the representatives should be allowed the right to discuss complicated material in an informal setting before making the decisions that are then made public.

"Caucuses are as old as the system itself — they have served the system well," Ackerman said.

"Decisions are made in the open," he said. "You can find someone's voting record; caucuses don't hide that."

Shea said knowing how a representative reaches a decision is as important as how he votes. Ackerman disagreed.

"We hold him accountable to how he votes, not what he says," the Republican chairman said. Ackerman said the economic future looks good. "The outlook is very bright. Inflation is low; retail and wholesale sales are up."

Shea said he feels the economic future is in jeopardy if Reagan serves another term. "Reagan's programs are going to get us in trouble," he said.

Ackerman said citizens cannot blame the deficit on Reagan. "Don't be fooled that this is Reagan's deficit. I don't know of a time when the president has spent a dime without Congress approving it."

Concerning Utah's voting habits, Ackerman said Utah is fairly reflective of the national mood. He said the public cannot predict how people will vote.

Shea said he agreed, "We really can't afford to have special interests."

They both said that participation in government is essential in our system.

"If our system is not running the way you like it then it is because participation is not strong," Shea said.

Gemayel scraps treaty while army faces rebels

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — President Amin Gemayel agreed to opponents' demands to scrap Lebanon's accord with Israel while his shattered army Thursday faced a threatened rebel assault on its last stronghold outside Beirut.

Syrian-supported Druze Moslem rebels maintained intense pressure on Gemayel by tightening their hold on a swath of coastline between Beirut and the Damour River, 5 miles south of the U.S. Marine base at Beirut International Airport.

The Lebanese army, demoralized and down to half of its strength of two weeks ago, lost the territory Tuesday and Wednesday. Remnants of the Fourth Brigade remained trapped between Damour and Israeli lines, 21 miles east of Beirut.

Radio reports said rebels were gathering for an attack on government troops holding Souk El Gharb, the army's last remaining stronghold, located on a south-east mountain ridge overlooking the presidential palace, the Ministry of Defense and the U.S. ambassador's residence in the Beirut suburbs.

"If some political breakthrough is not arrived at, they will send out another message," said a Western source close to the conflict, "and they will probably attack Souk El Gharb."

The army, aided by U.S. naval bombardments, held the village against intense rebel assaults last September.

Most of the remaining Lebanese army troops still under Gemayel's command were deployed in Christian east Beirut along a line confronting the Shiite Moslem rebels who took control of the western half of the city 10 days ago.

A Reagan administration official in Washington confirmed reports Gemayel had agreed to an eight-point peace plan containing a provision calling for abrogation of the U.S.-brokered accord reached with Israel last May 17.

Beirut state radio later quoted "well-informed Lebanese sources" also confirming Gemayel had finally made the critical decision to offer to tear up the agreement.

There was no immediate comment from the Christian-dominated Gemayel government. The Christian Phalangist radio, in apparent reference to the accord, said Gemayel was about to make a "decision of destiny."

Proposal to lift flood liability denounced by commission

By KEVIN BECKSTROM
Staff Writer

Utah County Commissioners denounced a proposal that would clear Salt Lake County of any liability for flood damage caused by failure to open the Jordan River flood gates.

"Their proposal is unacceptable to Utah County — totally unacceptable," said Utah County Commissioner Keith Richan.

The proposal suggests dropping Salt Lake County as a defendant in a $225 million lawsuit being filed by Utah Lake Landowners, an organization of land owners who suffered property damage during last year's flood.

Salt Lake County further proposes that the Jordan River be dredged to increase water flow, and that Salt Lake County be allowed to install and operate control structures at two sites on the Jordan River.

Salt Lake County is also asking for the compromise level of Utah Lake to be raised by two feet.

Richan said Salt Lake County's proposals have been discussed by leaders from the two counties.

"With this proposal, they are suggesting that Utah County would assume liability for flood damage," he said.

According to an 1885 agreement, the compromise point for Utah Lake was to be at a level of 4,488.75 feet above mean sea level. When the water level reaches 2 feet above that mark, flood gates on the Jordan River are to be opened, allowing the excess water to run off from the lake.

Salt Lake County did not open the flood gates in time last year, according to Utah County officials. "Now they're trying to break off the lawsuit," Richan said.

Terry Holsworth, director of flood control in Salt Lake County, admits the lawsuit will probably not be dropped.

Holsworth said the proposal was drafted to be a starting point for discussion between the two counties.

Concert policy re-examined

By CINDY CLAYTON
Staff Writer

A proposal is being drawn up by ASBYU to give students a louder voice in selecting concerts on campus, said ASBYU President Greg Fulmer.

The proposed policy would create a committee which would select the artists and schedule their appearances.

"It has been very difficult to get concerts," Fulmer said. After researching the problem he said he found four flaws in the present system that have been delaying decisions.

The first problem Fulmer cited was scheduling the Marriott Center. "This is hard because we have to compete with basketball games and practices, church meetings, dance concerts, Devotionals and forums."

"Usually a booking agent will only have a few days when his client can perform. It makes it difficult for us because of the events already scheduled," said Kyle Walenhorst, ASBYU executive vice president.

Fulmer said the second problem dealt with "four entities each claiming its own domain to schedule concerts. Such groups as the Performing Arts Series sponsored by the BYU Music Department, the Special Events sponsored by the Marriott Center, the Culture Office and the Social Office sponsored by ASBYU, are all competing to get the talent," Fulmer said.

"The proposed policy will bridge the separate groups and mend all the entities together," Fulmer said.

Fulmer said the third reason for the proposed policy is the lack of student representation in concert selection.

"The students have been seeking a bigger voice and more coordination in arranging concerts, and we hope to give them that power," he said.

"Fourth, there needs to be a definition of what our standards with concerts are," Fulmer said. Not many students are aware of what BYU standards are for concert performers because it hasn't been properly publicized.

"The process of writing this proposal has helped us identify the style and type of artists we would like to see on this campus," he said.

"We will now be looking more at the middle-of-the-road artists, such as Barry Manilow, Elton John, Lionel Richie, Michael Jackson, Neil Diamond and John Denver," Fulmer said.

Homicide case closed by police

By LAURA CHILDERS
Senior Reporter

University Police have closed the investigation of the Feb. 1 homicide of a student and have decided not to charge against a person thought to have been a conspirator in 38-year-old woman's fatal shooting.

Investigators have concluded that woman's former husband, Casey King Bear, was responsible for her death. University Police Chief Kelshaw said, "We are convinced that he was present when Bear was shot."

Sie C. American Bear, who was for majoring in university studies, was found dead in her Wymount home by her 11-year-old son on the morning of Feb. 1. She had been twice in the head.

A few hours after the shooting was closed, police began looking for King Bear, 47, Kelshaw said. American Bear's daughter-in-law reported seeing him at her mother's apartment complex the day of the shooting.

Officials had also received a report a cab driver who said he picked up King Bear was found dead in Salt City. He shot himself in the presence of three witnesses, said Sgt. Forbes of the Salt Lake County Sheriff's Office.

After King Bear's death, officers discovered among his belongings a note that he was at the time American Bear's death occurred," said.

The clothes were sent to Weber State Crime Lab for testing, he said. Investigators discovered blood stains matching American Bear's rare blood-type on the trousers worn by the man wearing the 25-caliber automatic pistol found at the scene of the shooting.

"Only 6 percent of the population has the blood-type that she has," Kelshaw said.

Investigators said last week they felt another person had been involved in American Bear's shooting. Kelshaw said the person may have provided King Bear with the 25-caliber automatic pistol found at the scene of the crime and may have removed the gun's serial number.

Police attempted to gather adequate evidence to prosecute the person, but Kelshaw said yesterday because of a lack of evidence, officials have declined to prosecute the former suspect. "Kicking Bear allegedly told (the former suspect) that he was going to use the gun for poisoning."

"It would be a miracle if further evidence came up," he said.

At the time of the shooting, officials could not determine whether American Bear's death was a suicide or a homicide. Kelshaw said that the first bullet struck above the left eye and was not fatal, he said.

The autopsy showed American Bear was shot twice in the head. The first bullet struck above the left eye and was not fatal, he said. The second bullet struck the victim above and behind her left ear and was fatal, he said.

Provo bargains for power, hearings shelved

By AMY WINTCH
Staff Writer

Hearings that could determine the future of Provo have been recessed until Feb. 27.

Provo City Utilities is currently negotiating with Utah Power & Light for transmission of power to Provo from a geothermal well drilled by Mother Earth Industries.

MEI's well, called Olga's Well, was drilled in the Cove Fort-Sulphurdale geothermal energy field. It may be the largest pure steam field in the state of Utah, said Wayne Portanova, president of MEI, Inc. Only four 100 percent pure steam fields have been found in the world.

Olga's Well was discovered on Oct. 24, 1983, and is capable of producing an estimated 14 megawatts of electricity, Portanova said.

Well capped

MEI capped the well after three weeks because there was no place for the power to go.

Before MEI discovered the field, they made a verbal agreement with Provo City, telling Provo it would have the first chance to buy the power generated if a well was drilled. Mayor James Ferguson said that MEI honored the agreement, but the power would have to be "wheeled in" on UP&L lines.

Provo produces about 80 megawatts per year from its own plant, said Ferguson. For Provo to become self sufficient in energy production, a 250- to 300-megawatt plant would need to be built. Provo was hoping for at least seven megawatts from the geothermal field.

Portanova said that it appears the field can produce anywhere from 100 to 1,000 megawatts.

development for UP&L. The primary issue dealt with co-generation facilities and what UP&L should pay to co-generators.

Finlayson said UP&L is supportive of co-generators and electricity. UP&L decided that the avoided rate would be used to determine the cost, he said. The avoided rate is the amount the company saves from having to purchase the unit itself.

Complex problem

The second issue dealt with transportation of power to Provo from the MEI well. This is a complex problem, said Finlayson. It has not been determined whether UP&L has enough capacity for such a venture, he said.

There is also a problem of past wells caving in, Finlayson said. There has not been enough research conducted or assessments made of the geology in the Cove Fort area. UP&L needs to have more information before it will commit itself, he said.

Own program

Finlayson said UP&L has been working on its own geothermal program. The Milford No. 1, a well capable of producing a possible 20 megawatts, should begin operation in April.

The Milford well is part of the Milford Geothermal Field, which is located approximately 15 miles from the Roosevelt Hot Springs area. A total of 18 more wells should be in operation by the turn of the century in the Milford field, Finlayson said. Each will be capable of producing 14 megawatts of power.

Provo City is in the middle of negotiating transportation rights with the time, said George Morse, engineering projects supervisor for Provo City Utilities. Morse said that Provo hopes power will be wheeled in from MEI by August.

Olga's Well shoots its geothermal power into the sky from Cove Fort-Sulphurdale energy field. Provo City negotiating for transmission of its energy to meet future power needs.

Reagan receives final Marine withdrawal plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan received a final plan for withdrawing most of the U.S. Marines from Lebanon within 30 days Thursday, and a senior White House official said the first troop movements could come within 48 hours.

The report, prepared by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, is designed to implement a pivotal decision set into motion by Reagan more than two weeks earlier. Reagan will give his formal approval Friday, the official said.

Although the timetable remained somewhat ill-defined, the official said the pullout will take place "in a stable and orderly fashion" and completion within 30 days "remains the president's expectation."

"I'm very confident that we will be able to complete this redeployment in the projected timetable," the official said.

The official disclosed the process was accelerated after a major push by Moslem militants last weekend in order to remove a major point of contention between the government and its sectarian opponents.

The official said about 200 of the 1,100 Marines now surrounded by Druze militants in their position at the Beirut airport will remain ashore to provide security to the U.S. Embassy and the residence of U.S. Ambassador Reginald Bartholomew. All told, the official said, about 500 American military personnel will remain in Beirut, including an expanded contingent of Army advisers and security and support units.

The official said the Marines moved offshore will continue to function as a peace-keeping force, despite unresolved questions over their precise role and mission while stationed off the Lebanese coast on ships of the 6th Fleet.

Housing industry sets new construction high

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite hefty mortgage interest rates, optimistic builders set a five-year high for new housing construction last month, starting 15 percent more projects than they did in December, the government said Thursday.

Considering the housing industry's appetite for steel, textiles, appliances and labor, the improvement was the best proof yet of a resurging economy in a week filled with good economic news.

The Commerce Department said the industry's benchmark, the pace of production in houses per year, reached 1.9 million in January, the best month since December 1978. It was a surprisingly large jump from December's 1.97 million, as its success in a separate report Thursday the department said personal income climbed a healthy 1.1 percent in January. Americans, on average, added $104 to their annual after-tax income.

Spending on both goods and services grew slightly more than income, 1.2 percent, forcing the savings rate down by 0.1 percentage point to 5.2 percent of disposable income.

At the same time, Federal Reserve economists said American industry worked at 79.9 percent of its capacity in January, the busiest pace in slightly more than two years and a 0.7 percentage point jump from December.

New path questioned

Y prof looks at Chernenko

By MANDY JEAN WOODS
Senior Reporter

The announcement Friday of Soviet leader Yuri Andropov's death and the subsequent announcement of Konstantin Chernenko, 72, as his successor was no great surprise to the West. But the path Chernenko will choose to follow is what the West is wondering about, according to a BYU political expert.

According to Eric Jones, a political science professor at BYU, the probable reason for Chernenko's election over strong contenders Mikhail Gorbachev, 52, and Grigory Romanov, 61, is that the "old guard" was not ready to hand over power to a younger person who would, in all probability, rule for at least 10, and possibly 15, years.

The so-called "old guard" is the group of Politburo members who have been in power and occupied key positions for at least 20 years. These include veteran Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko and Defense Minister Dmitri Ustinov.

According to Jones, there has been little change in the top leadership of the Soviet Union since the early 1960s and the accession of Brezhnev.

The appointment of Chernenko as General Secretary could also be seen as the Brezhnev faction reasserting its power, he said.

"I think they preferred an interim person rather than someone who would rule for a long time," said Jones.

Fewer fatal accidents, catastrophes in 1983

NEW YORK (UPI) — About 91,000 people died in accidents in the United States in 1983 — a drop of about 2,000 from 1982, a survey showed Monday.

Unlike 1982, which saw the loss of 154 lives in a Kerner, La., plane crash, 1983 was free of any record catastrophes, and catastrophic deaths decreased by 40 percent, the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company survey said.

The survey defined "catastrophe" as an accident that claims five or more lives.

The only major catastrophe was five days of torrential rains that swept through southern states between May 18 and May 23, spawned tornadoes in Texas and Louisiana, flooded homes and highways and killed at least 34 people.

Deaths in 1983 from all sources except fires dropped significantly, the survey said. Fires caused about the same number of deaths in 1983 as in 1982.

On Wall Street, the week's better-than-expected economic performances sparked fears of higher interest rates. Analysts said more investors became convinced interest rates are not going to ease any time soon.

Man sentenced to die, father asks for mercy

WESLACO, Texas (UPI) — The father of a high school dropout who police say killed six people during a crime spree triggered by marital trouble Thursday asked the public for help in overturning his son's death sentence.

Elderly F.C. Moreno, who suffers from epilepsy, said both he and his wife are ill and the knowledge their son, Eliseo Moreno, was given the death sentence for the slaying of a state trooper was causing them "to die slowly and very painfully."

Prosecutors said the shootings began after the younger Moreno's wife, Blanca, left him and sought refuge with her brother in Bryan, Texas.

Police said Moreno killed his brother-in-law, Juan Garza, Juan's wife, Esther, and later shot and killed Texas highway patrolman Russell Lynn Boyd, 25, who stopped Moreno during his 130-mile flight back to his native Lower Rio Grande Valley.

During that flight he kidnapped two people, shot to death three elderly people who refused to help him and stole two cars.

"It is true that my son killed the Garzas and the state trooper," the elder Moreno wrote in a letter published Thursday in the Valley Morning Star newspaper in Harlingen, Texas. "But they were killed while my son was insane and in a moment of madness."

Nevada nuclear tests curtailed after cave-in

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Scientists curtailed experiments Thursday in a remote section of the top secret Nevada Test Site where the earth caved in over an underground nuclear explosion, injuring 14 workers.

A government official said the sudden depression in the desert mesa at the test site Wednesday following a 20 kiloton-range blast was the first injury accident since testing began in Nevada in 1951.

Members of a surface re-entry team suffered fractures, cuts and bruises when part of a mesa jutting 6,000 feet above the desert collapsed beneath them. Ten were hospitalized, including one man in critical condition. Two were released Thursday.

There were no radiation injuries and no radiation leaks, spokesmen for the Department of Energy said.

The delayed action cave-in, three hours after the detonation, created an oval-shaped hole 10 to 30 feet deep, 60 feet wide and 150 feet long.

The explosion was triggered 1,168 feet below the mesa top and inside a granite tunnel drilled into the base of the Rainier Mesa.

The mesa, 93 miles northwest of Las Vegas is a section of the site of 618 nuclear experiments since 1952.

Cratering is expected when nuclear detonations are triggered underground in soft soil, but it has never happened in Rainier Mesa following a test of less than 20 kilotons.

Since the days of Stalin, all the leaders have held the post of General Secretary of the Communist Party.

He is usually chosen from among the small group of 10 to 14 men who are both members of the Politburo (the day-to-day governing body) and the General Secretariat (the party apparatus), said Jones.

The appointment is then ratified by the Central Committee.

Chernenko owes his political career almost exclusively to Brezhnev. Little is known about the early or personal life of the new leader, he said.

He was born in Siberia, the son of a peasant. He studied at the Central Committee school of party organizers during World War II and graduated in 1953 from Teacher's College in Kishinev.

Chernenko's relationship with Brezhnev began in the 1950s when Brezhnev went to the Moldavian Republic as the First Party Secretary, Jones said.

In 1956, Chernenko followed Brezhnev to Moscow and worked in the Department of Propaganda and Agitation.

In 1971, he was elected a member of the Central Committee, and in 1978, was advanced to full Politburo membership.

Chernenko has not had any significant experience outside of party policy except for ideology, and his education was not that usually appropriate for top posts," Jones said.

Heritage developers request more time

Heritage Mountain ski resort developers have requested a month's stay for their final master plan submitted to the Provo City Planning Commission.

In a letter to the Department of Community Development, Gary Williams, president of Heritage Mountain Development Co., wrote: "We know that the large quantity of materials submitted by us along with the many revisions requested have caused an impact on the schedules of your staff as well as our own. We hope that this additional time will give both of us the comfort we need."

The developers had until Thursday to demonstrate financial viability to the U.S. Forest Service and thus stay on their review time schedule. The planning commission threatened to cancel their public hearing on the development unless assured by the Forest Service that the developers had the money to build the minimum operable unit, the smallest element of the development that could function as a ski resort.

To this date, the Forest Service has not seen Heritage Mountain's financing for the minimum operable unit.

Cigarette advertising false, claims health associations

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The heart, cancer and lung associations charged Thursday that recent tobacco company advertisements seeking to open a debate about smoking are really a smoke screen to hide the hazards of cigarettes.

In an unprecedented joint news conference, leaders of the three national health organizations said there is nothing left to debate. They said 30 years of evidence is overwhelming that cigarette smoking causes lung cancer, heart disease, emphysema and chronic bronchitis.

"The debate about the health hazards of smoking is over and has been over for a very long time," said Dr. Douglas Lloyd, Connecticut commissioner of health services.

Study indicates mother's smoking may harm fetus

BALTIMORE (UPI) — A 2 1/2 year study of pregnant women has provided "very strong" new evidence that cigarette smoking is harmful to newborns, researchers said Thursday.

The study, conducted on 855 pregnant women in the Baltimore area, showed women who smoked or reduced smoking while pregnant gave birth to infants significantly heavier and longer than newborns of mothers who continued smoking at their usual level, researchers said.

"I think this is very strong evidence that the fetal growth is retarded by maternal smoking," said Mary Sexton, an associate professor at the University of Maryland School of Medicine and co-author of the study, funded by the National Institutes of Health.

Previous studies linked differences in birth weights and the number of cigarettes smoked by mothers. The University of Maryland study, however, was the first to show the correlation in a randomly selected sample group, Ms. Sexton said.

Ms. Sexton said the study's findings, which appear in the Feb. 17 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association, also provide the most definitive evidence to date of smoking's ill effects.

Straight Talk

2 of The Six C's

Your guide to determining the value of your diamond engagement ring

Cut

Cut refers to the particular placement and angle of each of the small facets on the surface of the diamond. If the diamond is cut ideally, each ray of light that strikes the diamond is reflected back to you and creates brilliance and sparkle in the diamond.

Sierra West diamonds are noted for their exceptional brilliance because of their close adherence to the ideal cutting formula established by the Gemological Institute of America.

Carat Weight

A carat is a unit of measurement for diamonds and precious stones. In the carat weight scale there are 100 points or 1 cent, just as there are 100 cents in a dollar. For example, if a diamond weighs 50 points it is a 1/2 carat diamond.

Former congressman is mulling candidacy

By CRAIG STEINBURG

Staff Writer
Former Democratic Congressman Wayne Owens said he is in the exploratory stage of deciding to run for governor and expects to make a decision in the next three weeks.

Owens' speech, delivered Thursday in 347 ELWC, was sponsored by the College Democrats.

Owens said he is considering running for governor, adding that he needs more encouragement before he decides. "I'm receiving encouragement from people to run. I'm interested in it."

He is of the opinion that the state needs to spend more money on education in order to better educate students with not only better teachers but with updated equipment.

Government officials need the courage to raise taxes to pay for programs, Owens said, also expressing a desire to see more money allotted for education in Utah.

"I think the governor's approach to education was a balanced program. I think what was accomplished was only a minimum of what was needed," He added that the education issue is going to be significant in the upcoming election.

He said members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints need to not only be aware of the obligation to preach the gospel, but also to fulfill the responsibility to improve society.

Many LDS members are not aware of Joseph Smith's admonition to the members of the LDS Church to preach the gospel and improve the world in which they live, he said.

"We have two obligations: to preach our message and make society better. As a Mormon society, we tend to be content not to worry about problems around us. We worry more about living for ourselves."

Owens said he does not think the LDS Church is one-sided in partisanship, but added that that view is reflected among its members and not its leaders.

"The Gospel is to go to all. The (LDS) Church cannot be defined as liberal or conservative. We offend if we take any position."

He said a person should pick a political party that can make the person comfortable, and it is more important to be involved, regardless of party choice.

"You can be anything you want to be in either party. It doesn't matter just as long as you do it."

Owens said he feels comfortable in being a Democrat because of the party's policy to help needy people. "The Democratic Party is more concerned with the need to care for those who don't have the ability to care for themselves."

Washington remembered

Founders honored Monday

By MANDY JEAN WOODS
Senior Reporter

On Monday, schools and businesses will close to pay tribute to this country's presidents — both past and present — and in particular people will remember the founding father, George Washington.

Washington left America a priceless legacy. He added the conscience of the colonies and outlined principles which have directed generations since.

Little schooling
Yet for all his wisdom, Washington had little formal schooling. He was born at Bridge's Creek, Va., in 1732, and at an early age showed diligence as a scholar.

At the age of 13, he wrote a set of more than 100 maxims that he called, "The Rules of Civility and decent Behaviour in Company and Conversation," which they epitomized the values that governed his

Some maxims included "Think before you speak," "Undertake not what you cannot perform," "Associate yourself with men of good quality if you esteem your reputation," "Be not hasty to believe reports toward the disparagement of any," and "Recognize what is due to others and practice self-control."

He attended various schools, but quit for good when he was 15 to become a surveyor for his tutor. The story is told of a schoolmaster who wanted to spare a slothful student by the example of Washington. He said, "When George Washington is your age, he was a surveyor." The youth replied, "Yes, and when Washington was your age, he was president of the United States."

The successes in Washington's life came only after hard, solid work. At the age of 20 he was made a major in the Virginia militia, and was later made commander of one of the military districts of Virginia.

Two years later, he was promoted to lieutenant colonel and served with distinction in the French and Indian War.

Represented Virginia

Following the war, Washington represented Virginia in both the First and Second Continental Congresses which led to his appointment as commander of the American army at the start of the Revolution.

He was a patriot and accepted no remuneration for his services. At the end of the war Washington returned to private life. At his retreat at Mount Vernon he attended to his plantation and followed up his interest in agriculture and forestry.

In a letter to Lafayette following the Revolution, Washington wrote, "We are not an independent people and have yet to learn political tactics. We are placed among nations of the earth and have a character to establish; but how we shall acquire ourselves, time must discover."

In 1785, Washington reluctantly accepted the position as the Virginia representative to the Constitutional Congress. Popular among the delegates, he was chosen unanimously to be the first president.

Questioned ability

Washington had no desire to be president, and even questioned his ability to meet the expectations of the nation.

Immediately after being inaugurated, Washington said, "I greatly fear that my countrymen will expect too much from me."

Washington had the ability to be objective and to hold a safe middle course between extreme positions. This showed in his efforts to reconcile differences between the states after the Revolution.

His forthright sense of fairness made him a poor party man and resulted in frequent conflicts and wrangles in his Cabinet.

Of the two most aggressive men in his cabinet, Washington wrote, "I have a great and sincere esteem and regard for you both, and ardently wish that some line could be worked out by which both of you could work."

His administration was hampered by problems of rising taxes, Indian outbreaks on the frontier and the invasion of American rights because of foreign wars.

But by the end of his eight years as president, Washington had perfected a financial system, created national credit, provided a circulating medium and established the principle of adjusting international differences by commissions.

LDS Church catches fire

A fire caused approximately $6,000 damage early Thursday morning at the Provo, Utah Stake Center of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

The fire at 1300 E. 900 South was discovered at 6 a.m. by Vaughn Parks, bishop of the 47th Ward, who had come in early to do some work, said Provo, Utah Stake President George Felsch.

"He noticed a red glow in the ceiling," Felsch said. "He (Parks) called the fire department then tried to put it out himself, but he was frustrated because the in-house fire hose just wasn't long enough."

"It's probably better that he was frustrated," Felsch said, "or we would have had extensive water damage."

The fire was caused by furnace controls that failed and allowed the furnace to overheat.

Overhead wood trusses caught fire, said the Provo fire department.

The insulation contained the blaze by stopping air flow from getting into the fire and kept damage down, Felsch said.

"The Church insurance people have assessed the situation and asked their maintenance people to fix it," he said.

Y slips by Aztecs in overtime

BYU senior forward Brett Applegate looks to cut around San Diego State's Michael Cage in BYU's 94-92 overtime win Thursday night in the Marriott Center. Applegate, who scored 17 points, was joined in the double-figures column by teammates Devin Durrant, Jim Usevitch, Scott Sinek and Chris Nikchevich.

By TROY STEINER
Senior Reporter

The game looked like it was over when the San Diego State Aztecs lobbed the ball into Michael Cage with less than five seconds left on the clock. But a Jim Usevitch block helped propel the BYU basketball team to a 94-92 overtime victory Thursday night.

The crucial play came as Cage got the ball on the left side of the lane and wheeled to give SDSU the last-second victory. Usevitch went up along with the All-America candidate and with a hand on the ball, stopped him before he could get the shot off.

"We thought Cage was fouled. We wanted him to go to the line," SDSU Coach Smokey Gaines said concerning the final play in regulation. Apparently the referees didn't think so as no foul was called and the play stood.

Usevitch also had some feelings concerning the block. "I thought it was a good block but I was afraid they might call me for hitting him with the body," he said.

In the end it was BYU's foul shooting that gave the Cougars the win. In the overtime period, Chris Nikchevich sank four foul shots and Mike Smith added two more to put the game on ice and give the Cougars a share of the WAC lead with UTEP.

While Devin Durrant had 31 points on the night, BYU displayed strong balance as four other Cougars scored in double figures. Brett Applegate, who played despite being sick with the flu, scored 17 points and gathered in nine rebounds. Usevitch and Scott Sinek came through with 16 points each and Nikchevich added 10 of his own.

The Cougars shot a devastating 91 percent from the foul line and collected a total of 20 points from the charity stripe. That, along with an aggressive defense, helped them to down the talent-laden Aztecs.

While Durrant was the high scorer for BYU, Cage led the way for the Aztecs with 25 points, even though he was ineffective on the boards.

Cage, who is one of the rebound leaders in the nation, was held to just five rebounds the entire game — way below his average. The rest of the Aztecs made up for Cage on the boards, however, as they out-rebounded BYU 40-29.

The game looked like it was going to be the same as most of the BYU-SDSU games played in Provo, with the Cougars winning by an average of just over 22 points a game. BYU took a 13-point lead into the locker room at halftime after being up by 15 at one time.

The Aztecs slowly whittled away at the lead and tied the game again at 82. "I think we should've won," Gaines said. "The game shouldn't have gone into overtime."

The Aztecs claimed that it was poor officiating that hurt them, but it really was the play by Usevitch, Sinek, Durrant and the whole Cougar team that was the Aztecs' undoing.

The 21,365 Marriott Center fans were also a big factor in the game. "We didn't get a call all night," Gaines said. "We don't get them at home; we can't expect to get them here."

The first half saw Sinek sink six of seven jumpshots and two free throws. The outside shooting by Sinek, and Durrant and the inside play by Usevitch kept the visitors from San Diego off balance.

Sinek ended up with seven of 10 from the field while Durrant was 10 of 15. Applegate also shot well, hitting eight of 15 field-goal attempts.

"We did a great job from the line," BYU Coach Ladell Andersen said. "Our guys responded to the challenge."

"Maybe overtimes are attracted to me," he said of BYU's fourth overtime game this season. "I don't know. But it is nice to win the close ones."

Fun run set for Saturday

A four-mile "Run Wild" fun run will be sponsored by the Utah Division of Wildlife Resources on Saturday at four locations.

The starting and finishing points for each of the four races are the Utah Division of Wildlife Resources offices in Salt Lake City, Springville, Ogden and Cedar City. Starting time is 11 a.m.

There is a $3 registration fee, or $5 includes a "Do Something Wild" cap.

Race-day registration will be from 9:30 a.m. to 10:45 a.m.

The competition will be in male and female age groups. Trophies will be awarded for the best times at each location and an overall grand champion for the state will be crowned.

Further information is available at the four Division of Wildlife Resources offices.

Proceeds from the race will be used to aid animals who are not hunted or fished for and need help to exist.

Cougars to face injury-riddled Irish

By TONY RAU
Sports Editor

After winning two consecutive overtime games against Western Athletic Conference competition, the BYU Cougars will take on one of the great names in college sports when they meet the Fighting Irish of Notre Dame Saturday in the Marriott Center.

This intersectional game, which will begin at 3 p.m., will be carried live by USA cable network and regionally on KUTV by Sports Productions, Inc. While the Notre Dame game will have no effect on BYU's pursuit of the Western Athletic Conference championship, BYU Head Coach Ladell Andersen said it is an important game for the Cougars.

"Beating a team like Notre Dame would be a feather in our cap because they are a winning team," said Andersen.

While Notre Dame is a winning team — they are 15-9 coming into Provo — they have dropped four of their last five games since losing the services of starting center Tim Kempton. The 6-foot-9 sophomore has been out of action since suffering a stress fracture to his lower right leg two weeks ago.

"We're a different team without Kempton," said Notre Dame Head Coach Digger Phelps. "We've been struggling since he's been out of the lineup. We can't play the physical game we like without him."

Moving into the starting lineup in Kempton's place is 6-foot-7 freshman Donald Royal.

In addition to losing Kempton, the Irish are also likely to be missing starting guard JoJo Buchanan. Taking his place will be Joe Howard, who is also a wide receiver on Notre Dame's football team.

"Joe Howard is the best point guard we have at this time," Phelps said. "He gives us penetration and he can shoot the ball. We are trying to get him to shoot the ball more."

The man Howard will be trying to get the ball to is guard Tom Sluby. In his last 15 games, the senior captain has averaged 19.3 points per game.

"I've been telling him since we started practice October 15 that he's our star," said Phelps. "He's now starting to want the ball and understand what we need from a leadership standpoint."

"I've told him that if he misses one shot to shoot again, if he misses three in a row to shoot three more. That's his job, and he's getting it done."

Stopping Sluby will be one of the major concerns for the Cougars.

"He's a good scorer," said BYU guard Chris Nikchevich. "He's a good perimeter shooter and he's strong — that's his biggest asset."

While the Cougars will be trying to stop Sluby, the Irish, who are the second-rated defensive team in the nation, will have their hands full with Devin Durrant. Durrant, who scored 31 points Thursday night against San Diego State, seems to be recovered from his bout with the flu.

"Durrant is the leading scorer in the nation and he is very tough to stop," said Phelps. "He also draws a lot of fouls."

Since Sluby and Durrant will both probably get their points, the game could be determined by who's team is able to control the tempo.

Whatever the tempo, Andersen expects Notre Dame to be ready for BYU.

"They'll come in well prepared of us because all of his (Phelps') teams are well prepared."

Women cagers to take on Utes

Sporting a 3-1 conference record, the BYU women's basketball team heads north tonight to take on instate rival Utah.

The Cougars beat the Utes in the Copper Classic in Logan earlier in the season without the help of freshman-center Tressa Spaulding.

The Utes have a strong team in this year boasting a 3-1 High Country Athletic Conference record and a 14-7 overall record. Anne Handy, a junior at Utah, leads the league in scoring, averaging 19.5 points a game. SDSU Head Coach Courtney Leishman said, "They are a very good basketball team. Their inside players do an excellent job." However, Leishman feels good about tonight's contest. "Everyone is healthy for a change. It is the healthiest we have been since December."

Two players who have been injured will be back for the Cougars tonight. Val Cravens, who separated her elbow in January, will see plenty of action tonight.

"Val's elbow is still pretty sore but she will be playing," Leishman said.

Stickers go to California

The BYU lacrosse team takes a 1-2 record on the road this weekend as it prepares to tangle with San Diego State and the University of California-San Diego.

Today, the Cougars will play the SDSU Aztecs. David Webber, a team captain, said, "It will be our toughest game this season. They (SDSU) have the only All-America player in the league."

UCSD will entertain the Cougars on Saturday. The Cougars won their first league game of the season last weekend beating Occidental College, 16-3. Claremont College handed BYU its first loss, a close 8-7 decision.

Although this is the Cougars' first season in the Western Conference Lacrosse League, Webber said they have gained the respect of the league teams.

"We're competitive with any team in the league. There is no reason for us not to expect a high finish."

This is the first year the Cougars are members of a sanctioned league, so the season has added importance.

"Not only is it an important year for the players, but also for the future of the sport," Webber said.

One concession the team had to make to join the league was playing all games away from home for the first year.

Two gymnasts, Cheryl Fletcher and Carolyn Jackson, were named to the HCAAC team.

Three members of the tennis team were included: Helena Christiane, Carol Sue Glassett and Susan Hunter.

Two golfers, Susan Billek and Karen Gibson, were also honored.

Three swimmers made the team: Sandra Erickson, Heidi Morgan and Alana Thompson.

Nancy Hale, a basketball player, and Vonda Skousen of the volleyball team completed the Cougar contingent.

Y places 20 on All-Academic squad

Twenty BYU athletes have been named to the High Country Athletic Conference Academic All-Conference team for the fall 1983 semester.

Athletes must have an overall GPA of 3.2 or higher to qualify.

Teresa Noel, a freshman from Nevada, Idaho, led the way for the Cougars with a 4.0 GPA. She is a hurdler on the track and field team.

Eight other members of the track team were also honored: Jill Holiday, Melody Jones, Sydney Laabs, Rebecca Larsen, Paige Sheffield, Lori Thayne and Jocelyn Whitehead.

U.S. medal total up to five

Hamilton, Johnson win gold

ARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (UPI) — Scott Hamilton and Bill Johnson gave the United States two medals at the Winter Olympics Thursday, one of which was the gold medal.

Hamilton, a three-time world champion who is seven years old, was a picture of precision last night when he swept his way to the figure skating championship before a cheering, captivated crowd at the Zetra Arena. After receiving his medal, he earned another ovation by skating around the ice waving an American flag.

Despite some unexpectedly low marks for technical merit, Hamilton received five marks of 5.9 — a perfect 6.0 — for artistic interpretation. Canadian Brian Orser moved up from fifth place to earn silver and Jozef Sabovcik of Czechoslovakia took the bronze. Brian Boitovich of Sunnyside, Ill., was fifth.

"It's been a long wait," said Hamilton, the Olympic man to win figure skating at the Olympics since David Jenkins in 1960. "I waited a long time for this. I was a little disappointed in the score, but I feel good. I'm glad it was enough to get out with the gold."

I've been losing it a bit, but it was good enough to win and I'm happy with it. I guess I learned it."

His big story of the day, and of the Olympics itself, came hours earlier when Johnson, edging down the mountainside just as quick as his will would carry him, skied himself into history by creating an honest, to godness legend. The American first befuddled conservative Europeans with his loud-mouth pronouncements of ring glory, and then he confounded the experts his deeds of daring.

And in the true tradition of Muhammad Ali and Namath, when the moment came to put up, he strian Anton Steiner third, and he broke the Olympic downhill record with a time of 1 minute 45.59 seconds down the 1.9 mile course.

For a young man who was virtually unknown until last month, when he won at Wengen, Switzerland, again becoming the first American man to capture a World Cup downhill.

Johnson has put intense pressure on himself by stating flatly during the last two weeks that he would win the Olympics.

"I think I did put some pressure on myself because if I had finished second I would have been a real bum," Johnson said, adding, "It really wasn't a big surprise. I approached it as just another race, and I won. But I expected to win."

Asked to explain the reason for his unwavering confidence against the powerful Europeans, Johnson said, "I predicted I'd win only because of the kind of course it is and the way my skis have been performing. There's always a degree of luck involved on race day. I could have done something and been out of luck."

But he also stressed, "I wanted it more than anybody else."

Johnson, who was a forerunner at the Lake Placid Olympics, making up his mind then that he would do the work necessary to qualify for the 1984 Games, has been carrying on a feud of sorts with some of the Europeans. Immediately after his victory, he said, "I enjoyed sticking it to the Austrians, but the Swiss are nice people. The Austrians think they should win it all the time, and you just can't do that."

Later, he toned down his remarks, explaining he was referring to only one Austrian, a team official.

"I like to beat them at their own game because they always think they should win," he said.

Long after these Winter Olympics are over, and the disappointment of a shallow U.S. showing is brushed aside, it will be remembered that Johnson stung the Europeans where it hurt them the most, and brought the United States its first-ever gold medal in men's Alpine.

After telling one and all for the last two weeks that he had the gold safely tucked away in his pocket, the 23-year-old daredevil beat back the European challenge Thursday and won the downhill, the glamour event of the Winter Games.

"I think I did put some pressure on myself because if I had finished second, I would have been a real bum," Johnson said. "It really wasn't a big surprise. I approached it as just another race, and I won. But I expected to win."

There was only one spot on the Bjelasica course that he was wary of, and once he passed it safely, Johnson said he told himself, "It's a motorway from here, so I put my head down and went for it. There's a speed limit in the States. I think I broke it today."

In edging Switzerland's Peter Mueller by 27-hundredths of a second, with Austrian Anton Steiner third, Johnson also broke the Olympic downhill record with a time of 1 minute 45.59 seconds down the 1.9 mile course.

In the euphoria of victory, Johnson managed to get in another dig, saying, "I enjoyed sticking it to the Austrians, but the Swiss are nice people. The Austrians think they should win it all the time, and you just can't do that."

In contrast to the effusive Johnson, the women's downhill was won by shy, soft-spoken Michela Figini of Switzerland, who at the age of 17 became the youngest gold medalist ever in Alpine. Marie-Theres Nadig, also of Switzerland, was 17 days older when she won the 1972 downhill at Sapporo.

"I have never been so happy in all my life," Figini said while wiping tears away from her eyes. "I took a lot of risks but everything went without trouble."

Maria Walliser, the current World Cup downhill leader, gave Switzerland the silver medal behind her teammates and the bronze went to Olga Charvata, providing Czechoslovakia its first ever Alpine medal.

Debbie Armstrong, winner of the women's giant slalom on Monday, managed only a 21st in the downhill, placing her behind teammates Holly Flanders, who was 16th, and Maria Marichev, 19th.

The victories by Johnson and Hamilton boosted the meager United States haul on this 10th day of the Games to three gold and five medals overall.

World Champion Rosalynn Summers of Edmonds, Wash., made a costly mistake in her short program earlier Thursday with a clumsy landing from a double axel that cost her the lead in the women's figure skating. Katarina Witt of East Germany moved in front with the free skating still to come with 2.2 placements to 2.6 for Summers.

Tiffany Chih, runnerup to Summers in the U.S. Nationals, is tied for sixth and former world champion Elaine Zayak is 11th.

Despite losing her lead, Summers still was confident of gold on Saturday night's final.

"I feel good being in second because the long is my strong point," she said. "I wasn't nervous and I felt very confident out there. I know now that I have to skate the best I ever have and put my heart and soul into it."

With three days remaining in the Games, East Germany continues to lead in gold medals with seven, although the Soviet Union edged in front, 20-19, in total medals.

Auburn Tigers face tough slate

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

If you thought Auburn's '83 football schedule was tough, take a close look at its 1984 slate.

The Tigers, during an 11-1 run that included the Southeastern Conference championship, a Sugar Bowl victory and a No. 3 national ranking, played nine teams that made it to bowls — and beat eight of them.

Auburn appears to be looking at a tougher schedule next fall.

The final UPI rankings had Miami No. 1, Nebraska No. 2, Auburn No. 3, Georgia No. 4, Texas No. 5, and Florida No. 6. The Tigers play four of those (all but Nebraska), opening their season against defending national champion Miami in the Kickoff Classic at East Rutherford, N.J., on Aug. 27, and going to Texas 19 days later for their second game.

Auburn, going into its fourth season under Coach Pat Dye and with 46 lettermen returning, has to be considered a stronger candidate for the No. 1 spot.

Cougar wrestlers

knock off Oregon

The BYU wrestling team ended its season Wednesday night with a commanding win over the Oregon Ducks 39-8.

The win gives the Cougars a winning record on the year with an 8-7 mark and it also gives the Cougars a little extra momentum as they prepare to compete in the WAC Championships scheduled for Feb. 24-25.

Two Cougars wrestled outside of their weight class and still managed to win their respective matches. Both Brad Andersen and Kelly Sander moved up.

Andersen, who usually wrestles at 118, wrestled at 126 and pinned his man with 44 seconds left in the third period.

Sander, who usually wrestles at 158, wrestled at 166 and pinned his man to win by one point, 7-6.

Along with Andersen, Fred Allan at 158 pounds and Henry Williams also pinned their opponents for wins.

'Terms of Endearment' earns 11 nominations

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — "Terms of Endearment," the story of the love-hate relationship between a mother and a daughter, Thursday earned 11 Oscar nominations — including best picture — to dominate the 56th annual Academy Awards competition.

"The Right Stuff," the story of America's first astronauts, won eight nominations, including best picture, followed by six for Sweden's "Fanny & Alexander."

Also nominated for best picture were "The Big Chill," "The Dresser" and "Tender Mercies."

Shirley MacLaine and Debra Winger, who play the mother and daughter, respectively, in "Terms of Endearment," were both nominated for best actress. MacLaine has been nominated four times for the top award but has never won.

Also nominated for best actress were Jane Alexander, who played the mother in "Testament," a film about a nuclear holocaust; Meryl Streep, who played a contaminated nuclear plant worker in "Silkwood"; and newcomer Julie Walters, who depicted the ambitious English student in "Educating Rita."

Nominated for best actor were Michael Caine, the alcoholic professor in "Educating Rita"; Tom Conti for his role as the traveling poet in "Reuben, Reuben"; Robert Duvall as the washed-up country singer in "Tender Mercies"; and Tom Courtney and Albert Finney in "The Dresser."

Barbra Streisand, who wrote, produced, directed and starred in "Yentl," failed to get a nomination for best actress or best director.

The nominees for best director were Peter Yates for "The Dresser," Ingmar Bergman for "Fanny & Alexander," Mike Nichols for "Silkwood," Bruce Beresford for "Tender Mercies" and James Brooks for "Terms of Endearment."

Jack Nicholson, who played a womanizing astronaut, and John Lithgow, who portrayed a staid small-town banker having his first affair, were nominated for best supporting actors for their performances in "Terms of Endearment."

Other nominees for best supporting actor were Charles Durning as the Nazi officer in the comedy "To Be or Not to Be," playwright-actor Sam Shepard for his role as test pilot Chuck Yeager in "The Right Stuff," and Rip Torn for his role as a poor farmer in "Cross Creek."

Singer Cher won a nomination for best supporting actress in her first dramatic role in "Silkwood."

Other nominees were Glenn Close for "The Big Chill," Linda Hunt for "The Year of Living Dangerously," Amy Irving in "Yentl" and Alfre Woodward for "Cross Creek."

Y sponsors first conference on troubles of black families

By JANICE GARDNER and SHANNON HALL
Staff Writers

Several speakers addressed the problems of black families Thursday at the first annual BYU Black Family Conference. Among the speakers were Dr. Barbara Solomon and Dr. Robert Staples.

Solomon, who is a professor of social work at the University of California at Los Angeles, said black families of today face certain paradoxes and are too diverse to be dealt with by generalizations.

There is a great deal of diversity among the black family. "Some black families are headed by strong-willed black women . . . but we also have households headed by strong-willed men whose word is just as strong as any patriarch in the Old or New Testament," Solomon said.

Solomon referred to the generalization that most black families are headed by females and that all are poor.

"These generalizations come from sociologists, psychologists, psychiatrists, social workers and others in the business of generalizations, and we in the profession use them as prescriptions for action," Solomon said.

To illustrate this point Solomon related two paradoxes of the black family. One involved the story of "Little Black Sambo," which is the tale of a little black boy in India.

"They hate it because they see in it all the stereotypes and oppression in their lives," Solomon said.

Psychologists interpret the reason blacks hate the story and whites love it in terms of psychosexuality and childhood sexuality. "In using this to help people, it leaves you nowhere to go," she said. "The problem is not in the insights, but where do you take it from here."

The other paradox comes from George Gilder's book, "Wealth and Poverty." Gilder contends the only route from poverty is work, family and faith. This implies a reduction in welfare and other social programs, Solomon said.

"We need to facilitate and support programs for parent education and for the institutionalizing of families," she said.

There is a problem with fragmentation because of the different religious, cultural and political beliefs of the black family, Solomon said. For this reason, social programs are often operated from offices in local churches.

Staples, an assistant professor of sociology at the University of California in San Francisco, addressed the deterioration of the black family in society.

"There is no indication that blacks in society do not want to have a stable family life. When slavery began, the only two things that really belonged to blacks was their family and their church. Since that time (slavery), the family has undergone a severe transformation," Staples said.

"There are several theories about what initiated the deterioration of the black family. The historical theory suggests that the black family was destroyed under slavery, but the neo-historical theory says the black family was intact during the period of slavery."

"Changes in the black family took place after the 20th century. The peasant, folk culture of blacks began to break down and they became more dependent on institutions," he said.

One basic premise that does not exist among other groups but exists within the black race is the imbalance of the sex ratio. There are approximately one million and a half more black women than black men in this country, according to Staples.

Adding problems to the black family is the fact that many black men of marriageable age are enrolled in the military.

"A lot of young black men are enrolled in the army and this tends to be within the marrying years. It is hard for a young man in that position to have a good family life when he is gone a majority of the time."

Staples said that unemployment and drug or alcohol-related problems decrease the ranks of men who would make good husbands.

"With these kind of odds, black women have very few opportunities for marriage. Black women with college educations have even less opportunities for marriage. The ratio of black women in college compared to black men enrolled in college is 46 to 1 in certain educational facilities."

Staples said although the solution to these problems is not popular among the Reagan administration and society, one does exist. "One key is to improve the skills of black students so they are able to compete equally. There also needs to be some improvement of the economic conditions. There must be more employment opportunities. Of course, the demographic trends may help some of these conditions."

Seminar to begin Saturday

BYU's Cougar Cable and the Associated Artists club will sponsor a seminar Saturday for anyone interested in film production, according to Adam Lloyd, promotions manager for Cougar Cable.

Featured speakers at the seminar will be Reed Smoot, an Academy Award-winning cinematographer; Dick Bickerton, a professional producer of feature films; Tip Boxell, a professional actor and writer of short films; and Steve Lowe, KSL-TV producer and production manager of Video West.

Registration for the seminar will begin at 9 a.m. in Studio One, HFAC, and will cost $4 for persons who are not members of ASSA.

Interested persons may contact Daryl Rogers at Ext. 4269, Pete Hansen at Ext. 7025, or Sherry Eden at 377-4624.

Denver to perform

John Denver will appear in concert at the Marriott Center on March 24, said Jay Clark, ASBYU Social Office vice president.

Tickets for the concert will go on sale at 11 a.m., Feb. 24 at the Marriott Center ticket office, said Clark.

"Students are allowed to purchase two tickets per activity card, however, the student is only allowed to bring a maximum of four activity cards with him," Clark said.

Denver's singing career began in the early 1970s when he released his first album titled "Rhymes and Reasons."

He scored his biggest success, however, three years later when he released his fourth album, "Rocky Mountain High."

He has produced a total of 20 albums and his hit songs include "Annie's Song," "Take Me Home Country Roads," "Sunshine" and "Calypto."

Denver has appeared on several television shows including a variety show with Frank Sinatra and a Christmas special with the Muppets. He is currently attending and performing at the Sarajevo, Yugoslavia Winter Olympics.

The BYU concert will begin at 8 p.m.

Pair dance in ballet concert

By PAM PARKS
Staff Writer

Mark Lanham and Lisa Hess grew up together and although both are professional ballet dancers, each began dancing in a different way.

They will be performing "La Corsaire Pas de Deux" in "Ballet in Concert," which is being presented in the Pardoe Drama Theater, HFAC.

Hess is currently a soloist with the New York City Ballet. Lanham is a free-lance dancer who has performed with Ballet West and the San Francisco Ballet Company.

Lanham's first dance invitation was through Hess' father, Neil Hess, artistic director of the Lone Star Ballet Company.

"I always thought ballet was for girls," Lanham said.

However, he "found ballet to be much harder than anything I ever tried."

"I didn't really have direction and I didn't think about performing," Lanham said. He began dancing at the age of 18. Now at age 23, he is a professional dancer.

Unlike Lanham, Hess always wanted to be a ballerina. She began dancing at the age of 6, and studied primarily under her parents, Neil and Camille Hess. "My father has been a great support to me in every way. He has supported me by coming to performances and he has been a great help financially," Hess said.

"I dance to please the public and because of that I receive joy from dancing," Hess said.

Lanham believes the enjoyment of dancing has spiritual connotations. "Dancing is a spiritual expression. . . I believe that ballet is part of the prophecy of Joel — 'your young men will see visions, your old men will dream dreams.'"

Hess' dream came true when she was chosen to be a member of the New York City Ballet. "I was attending the School of American Ballet when I was chosen with one other girl to perform," recalled Hess.

Hess began performing with the New York City Ballet in 1976 and was promoted to a soloist position in 1982.

She has performed in the roles of the Sugarplum Fairy and the Dewdrop fairy in "The Nutcracker." Her other major roles include the Scotch girl in "Scotch Symphony," "Dances at a Gathering" and "La Source." Lanham performed in "New Orleans" before he had taken any dance classes. He also performed in Bruce Marx's "Inscape" with Stacy Swann, the Royal Mormon Ballet and the International Ballet in Tokyo.

His time with the San Francisco Ballet Company proved valuable to his personal growth and his role as a dancer. "I was a student of Anatole Vilzak. He built my self-esteem by asking me if I was a good dancer. He would keep asking until I said 'yes.' It is important to be encouraged by everyone," Lanham said.

Hess performed as a guest artist at Jacob's Pillow this year. She appeared in concert in "Nureyev and Friends" and "Peter Martins and Friends," and has appeared on television shows such as "The Mervyns" and "New York City Ballet presents 'Bournonville.'"

Hess feels that her time with the New York City Ballet has been the most rewarding experience. "I enjoy traveling all over the world. The most important thing is that I work with great dancers," she said.

Hess said that she "feels a sense of joy when performing 'Le Corsaire.'" "Ballet in Concert" is Lanham's second performance of "Le Corsaire" at BYU. He previously danced the number throughout the United States and Japan.

Although he has progressed, Lanham still feels the need to keep pushing. "I haven't perfected to the degree I want to. Every day I think I ought to just quit, but if I give in, I'll just pull the rug out from under me. I don't think I'll ever quit."

Women in Mexican conflict to be focus of student play

The student production, "Soldadera," will continue its run tonight and Saturday at 6 p.m. in the Nelke Experimental Theater, HFAC.

According to Charles Metten, a BYU professor of theater and cinematic arts, the production is the product of Theater 548, a class in which advanced students are required to direct one to two hour plays. "Soldadera," written by Josefina Niggli, is a drama about the women in the Mexican Revolution and means

"soldier woman."

The play is directed by Rosa Rubalcava, a senior from Norwalk, Calif., majoring in theater. Metten said it is a courageous play for Rubalcava to be directing because it is about her own Lamanite heritage. "It is also a play for women," he added.

The cast includes seven women and one man, three of whom are of direct Mexican descent. Admission is free.

Dancers' Company perform in Hawaii

The BYU Dancers' Company will leave Monday for two-week performances at the Kula, Hawaii, where they will perform at the high school level. The aim of the Dancers' Company is to educate a variety of audiences in the art of dancing through their performances. According to Director Deborah, the group teaches a new way of thinking in hopes of synthesizing new information. "I allow students to visualize and verbalize and thus broaden their understanding of dance. Education should be process-oriented, not product-oriented," Deborah said. "Artists in the program should allow children to participate as creators and spectators. However, they do have to see the end product." Exposure to dancing is uncommon for many children and it is often overlooked by young people in selecting a career. Deborah said, "Dancing is an option in life. Students take field trips to theaters and bread factories, but people forget to think that dancing is an option."

FLICK FLACK

The Daily Universe, under the title "Flick Flack," publishes synopses of movies shown in local theaters and on campus. Movies listed in "Flick Flack" are not necessarily endorsed by The Daily Universe.

ANGEL (R) — The plot of this inept movie centers around a young high school honor student who poses as a Hollywood hooker by night. A dreadful exploitative production. Sex, nudity, violence, profanity.

BLAME IT ON RIO (R) — This romantic comedy stars Michael Cain and Joseph Bologna as two men who take their teenage daughters on a vacation to Rio de Janeiro. Although there are some funny moments, this movie is more of a sex comedy. Sex, nudity, profanity.

GHANDI (Varsity Theater) — Ben Kingsley stars in this superb epic that relates the story of one man's attempt to establish peace in his country through non-violent means. A stirring drama that won the award for best picture.

LA TRAVIATA (International Cinema) — Directed by Franco Zeffirelli, this 1983 operatic movie features Placido Domingo. One of the best filmed operas, this movie offers powerful music and excellent performances by the leads.

RECKLESS (R) — This movie is a mediocre troubled teenagers story. Although Aidan Quinn gives a fine performance in the lead role, this movie is terribly uneven. Sex, nudity, profanity, violence.

STAR 80 (R) — A highly overrated film based on the true story of Dorothy Stratten, a playboy centerfold who was shot and killed by her husband. Bob Fosse directed this disturbing movie that delves into the Playboy kingdom. Marjorie Hemingway stars. Sex, nudity, violence, profanity.

THE RIGHT STUFF (PG) — Based on Tom Wolfe's book, this film probes the lives of the seven astronauts in the Mercury Project. A suspenseful and mesmerizing film that will surely be a contender for some Oscars.

UNFAITHFULLY YOURS (PG) — Dudley Moore stars as a Symphony conductor who suspects his wife, Nastassja Kinski of cheating on him with a violin virtuoso, Armand Assante. Profanity, sex.

As a Marine Officer, you could be in charge of a Mach 2 + F/A-18A, a vertical take-off Harrier or one of our other jets or helicopters. And you could do it by the time you're 23. But it takes a special commitment on your part. We demand leaders at all levels. We teach you to be one. If you're a freshman or sophomore, ask about our undergraduate officer commissioning programs. If you're a junior, check out our graduate programs. Starting salaries are from $17,000 to $23,000. And you can count on going farther...faster.
